WELCOME BACK!

MATH: Your children have been working really hard through this first math module. We will begin Module 2 the week after next, this module will start off with telling time and reading a clock and it will then do some work with measurement. I am excited to help students learn how to read a clock. We will begin some speed multiplication quizzes next week. If students pass all levels before spring they will get to attend a class ice cream party.

ELA: Students have been working a lot on writing lately. I am very proud of their perseverance. They will be coming home with their first finished writing project later next week. It is always great to see how much they can do. As far as comprehension tests, we have begun doing those online, therefore you will not be seeing a graded test come home weekly, but you can see their grades on PowerSchool, reminder if you have any questions regarding grades let me know!

Science: This week we started our first science unit for the year, Invisible Forces and Motion. The students got to work through an experiment using pushes and pulls to create a hopper and test out their hypothesis of making them jump higher. It was a great activity. Next week we will continue by creating bridges in class and testing how to make them stronger.

Other: Your kids did a great job at helping me with my project for Grad School. Thank you so much for allowing your children to help me out! It was really fun to show them that even adults have to do homework sometimes.
